

I'm totally opposed to relaxing the rules for media ownership for two reasons. The first is that, as a public relations professional, it is already so difficult to find a diversity of outlets for the variety of clients I represent. Clear Channel is the 800 lb. gorilla in our market and I dread their gaining any more power and control. The second is as a citizen who tries to stay informed. Over the course of my life, I've seen the radical narrowing of views presented to the public on important issues. I'm convinced that fewer media owners would further hinder the democracy of free discourse. Please do not vote on June 2, but delay until the people are truly heard from on this issue.
